Now at this day comes the plaintiff by her attorneys and files her petition and affidavit, alleging, among other things, that defendant Ray Harlin Keister is a non-resident of the State of Missouri; Whereupon, it is ordered by the Clerk of said Court in vacation as follows: To the said defendant Ray Harlin Keister, you are hereby notified that the plaintiff has commenced a suit against you in this court, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony heretofore contracted between the plaintiff and defendant on the ground that the defendant has offered to the plaintiff such indignities as to render her condition intolerable in this, that the defendant repeatedly cursed and abused the plaintiff and in the month of December, 1917, the defendant struck the plaintiff and that on the 15th day of June, 1919, the defendant deserted the plaintiff and their child and that unless said Ray Harlin Keister be and appear at this Court, at the next term thereof, to be begun and holden at the Court House in the City of Lexington, in said County, on the 10th day of October next, and on or before the said 1st day answer or plead to the petition in said cause, the same will be taken as confessed, and judgment will be rendered accordingly.

And it is further ordered, that a copy hereof be published, according to law in the Lexington Intelligencer, a newspaper published in said county of Lafayette, designated by the plaintiff and her attorneys of record, for four weeks successively, published at least once a week, the last insertion to be at least fifteen days before the first day of said next October term of this court.

AGUAR WAS "COUNTED OUT"

Fierce Animal Overestimated Its Fighting Ability When It Entered Ring With Locomotive.

A big and fierce Colombian jaguar, with the same discretion that characterized the bull that thought it could butt a locomotive off the track, tackled a similar job in a jungle land near Santa Maria with similar results, according to passengers of the United Fruit steamship Tivives, in recently from Colombian, Canal Zone and Jamaican ports.

When the Tivives arrived at Santa Maria many passengers went ashore for a ride through the wilds, accompanied by two native guides, who agreed to catch monkeys for $1 each for the women.

While chasing the monkeys the jaguar, a female, appeared with her cub, and all the party fled, except one guide, who sought refuge in a tree, with the beast in pursuit. They crossed the railroad tracks as a train was approaching, and were pleasantly surprised to note that the jaguar apparently decided to knock out the noisy locomotive before attacking the fugitives. A few snarls and an aggressive paw did not count much in the one-sided duel. There was not enough left of the jaguar to identify her as that sort of a jungle creature.—New York Herald.

WARTS SPREAD BY INFECTION

Experiments Have Proved Beyond Doubt That They Can Be Caused by Inoculation.

The cause of warts has not been clear, but many an old-time school-boy was doubtless convinced that they were spread by contact and evidence of Doctors Wile and Kingery now seems to show that ordinary warts are produced by a specific infectious agent, that differs from most infections in not thriving on ordinary cultural mediums, and that belongs to the class of viruses that cannot be caught on any filter. In the experiments reported to the Journal of the American Medical Association, ordinary warts were removed and ground in a mortar with salt, the mash obtained being passed through the finest filter under pressure. The filtrate was shown by the usual tests to be sterile, and it was injected into several persons. In four to eight weeks tiny warts appeared at the points of injection, some of them gradually increasing to the size of a split pea. Inoculation with these warts gave a second generation; and this proof of contagion is strengthened by the tendency of ordinary warts to grow in crops, their transmission by contact, and the appearance of frequent multiple daughter warts.

SCIENCE WINS AIR SECRET.

The German method of treating the aluminum alloy used in the frames of their rigid dirigibles was long a well-kept secret. Suspecting that it was a heat-treating system, the scientists in a large Pittsburgh steel mill have, after conducting many experiments along this line, announced the discovery of the method and have tabulated the proper degrees of temperature and the length of time these must be maintained.

An unlooked-for outcome of the experiments was the discovery of a material which is said to produce an alloy superior to that produced by the German method.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

HOW KNOWLEDGE IS SPREAD.

Mr. Augustus Linkins of Sunville, Ala., was reading an old newspaper in which he chanced upon an item he thought might interest his friend.

"I observes by dis papah," said Mr. Linkins "dat de smallest coos in de world is to be found in de South seas. Dis papah says dat de average weight of sich a coo does not exceed one hundred an' fifty pounds."

"Does yo' suppose," asked his listener, "dat dat's where dey gits de condensed milk from?"—Harper's Magazine.

BRAIN TWISTER.

"I've got a hard one this time," said the man who makes the questionnaires.

"What is it?" inquired the faithful assistant.

"Step up to any man in a town that has been dallying with daylight saving and ask him what time it is."

HAD THE RIGHT CIVIC SPIRIT

Also Indianapolis Man Knew His Duty Toward the "Stranger Within His Gates."

An incident happened the night before the speedway race which does much to boost Indianapolis as "no mean city," and makes the stranger feel that he is not a stranger.

A business man came downtown to watch the crowds. He stopped at the News office, looked at the pictures in the windows and went inside. Two men and their wives from Detroit were in the lobby asking for the room clerk. "We can't get in at the hotels and we can't find a place to sleep or to leave our car," one of them said.

The good citizen didn't wish to take in roomers. But he had to uphold his city and do as he would be done by. So he called his wife on the phone, but could not get her.

"You folks come out with me," he said. "I'll take a chance on my wife."

Needless to say the visitors were welcomed and spent a pleasant night instead of sleeping in their car.

And they naturally have a fine opinion of Indianapolis citizens.—Indianapolis News.

REALLY MEASURES BY LIGHT

Instrument of Marvelous Delicacy That Does Its Work Along Extremely Simple Rules.

The delicate measurements demanded by modern processes and machines have led to the invention of many instruments of precision that surprise the uninitiated by their capabilities, which are often based on extremely simple rules. Among these is a little apparatus put upon the market for determining the thickness, or, as one might say, lack of thickness, of extremely thin plates, wires and threads. The inventor likens its action to that of a lever in which a ray of light takes the place of the beam. Essentially the apparatus consists of two carefully ground plates in contact with one another, the upper one being attached to a movable arm. When an object is placed between the edges of the plates the upper plate is displaced a little in level, and the effect of this displacement is magnified by a reflected ray of light which falls upon a graduated scale. Thus the most delicate measurements of thickness are easily and quickly made.

CHILDREN'S PLAY.

Summer weather, which permits children to play freely out of doors, has a distinct effect upon their play habits and their overwhelming desire to get out into the fresh air should be appreciated and met by parents.

Get children together in outdoor play groups. It is good for them and easier for the mothers. Let a mother or several mothers or a play-group teacher or a really intelligent governess supervise their play by suggestion in such a way that the children feel that they are at most merely taking a suggestion from their elders and working it out their own way.

HE WAS PRACTICING.

A lady on entering the kitchen early one morning saw a plate and knife and fork, the former of which had evidently contained cold pie. The lady strongly suspected a certain policeman of having supped off it, and the following conversation took place between her and the cook:

"Mary, what has become of the cold pie that was left?"

"Oh, I didn't think it was wanted, mum, and so I gave it to the dog."

"Does the dog use a knife and fork, then?" the mistress sarcastically inquired.

"Not very well yet, mum, but I'm teaching him to," was the unabashed reply.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

POWER OF CUSTOM.

"You gave up trying to regulate bathing costumes?"

"Had to," replied the seaside constable. "It isn't reasonable to expect a man to arrest his own wife and daughters."

THEIR BARK MEANS ENMITY

Mexican Frogs Quick to Recognize Their Friends, According to Man Who Owns One.

Barking frogs never bite. But do they bark?

Behold J. M. Millert, presiding genius of a florist's shop at the Hotel Plaza, prepared to answer in the affirmative.

In a cunningly contrived jar Mr. Millert houses one elongated, speckled, head-eyed, throat-quivering Mexican frog, name unknown, pedigree assured, bark guaranteed.

To Mr. Millert the other day came a reporter for the World with nothing much else on his mind save a desire to hear a frog bark.

"Just like a dog," said Mr. Millert, tapping the glass case affectionately. "But only at strangers he doesn't like."

The reporter scowled. Mr. Millert smiled. The frog wriggled. But nary a bark. It was plain he had taken an instant fancy to the reporter, and had discerned immediately the scowl was unreal.

"Great pal, my frog," said Mr. Millert. "He knows me. Always turns his eyes to me as I walk around. Frogs are the best pals in the world—and he barks."

Others stand ready to testify to the bark, those with unfortunate dispositions that jar a Mexican frog's sensibilities. Mr. Millert doesn't believe his frog is a watch frog, capable of sniffing gentlemen with Pertillon educations. His frog is too superior for that. He simply snubs 'em.—New York World.

Father—That's right. I won't.
Kid—Then I must tell you I told you a lie this morning.

"DIDN'T IT RAIN!"

Noah Swayne is never too weary for a song.
Round a campfire in the Poconos he was often called on for a lyric, and they tell me his enunciation of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was so clear that, like George Whitefield preaching, he could be heard a mile away.

But he sang once too often last summer. For after he had sung "The Battle Hymn" his hearers would not rest content till he gave them Harry Burleigh's rollicking ballad, "Didn't It Rain!"

Whereupon a competent witness informs me, it promptly began to rain, and it rained for 30 days, till Noah began to think that, like his namesake, he would have to build an ark in place of his beloved motorboat.

It rained till the children canoodled over the tops of the dock; and Mr. Swayne now has a reputation as a professional rainmaker second to none.—Philadelphia Public Ledger

AS A SPECIMEN.

"Where in the demmition blazes is that new reporter, Jobbles?" belittled the city editor.

"I sent him to cover a lecture on 'The Missing Link,'" said the assistant city editor.

"You did, eh? Well, I hope you told him to sit in the rear where he wouldn't attract much attention. At a meeting of that kind he's liable to be drafted."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

DISTINCTION UNFOUGHT.

"Do you believe you possess the high qualities of character which make a man a good loser?"

"I flatter myself that I do," replied Senator Serghum; "at the same time I hope circumstances will never be such as to compel me to prove it."
